Q. W. Barrero, Bebee Barrero, E. R. Pierson. SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. RATES FOR ADVERTISING

Made Known on Application. APRIL - - - 7, 1886.

It was announced when the consolidation of the News and Herald was efbe changed at some time in the future, and the proprietors consider this an appropriate time to change it. With this issue the HIGHTAND NEWS goes into its fiftied year, as a steadfast Republican journal. The last number was 53 of Volume 49, the extra number being added to keep the beginning of the year in the month of April, where it was fifty years ago.

Retaining the old heading of the News has occasioned a good deal of misunderstanding on the part of advertisers and subscribers, and to correct false impressions is one of the purposes of the present change. The proprietors of both papers constitute the NEWS-HERALD Company, and the subscription list is combined from the names on both sets affairs is traceable to three sources of books. To advertisers a large list of subscribers, with a reasonable rate for third, the wretched poverty of another space, offers a special inducement. The Only two offices in our knowledge fol patrons of our job office will take notice that we possess the entire equipments in country districts; the other, Solicitor of both offices, and employ one of the for the Incorporated Village of Hills best job printers in Southern Ohio, and is ample, the candidates for it are more yet are prepared to do work as cheaply so. There is a very large class of citias any office that does honest work on a reasonable basis of prices.

We have been studying the wants of our readers, in general, and our efforts have been rewarded by a very perceptible increase in our subscription list. In the future we shall continue to labor for the benefit of our patrons, that the paper may still be conducted in their interest as well as our own. We shall endeavor to have our news pages characterized by thoroughness, our political columns by vigor and justice, and the entire journal by careful preparation and sound business principles. GEORGE W. BARRERE, BEBEE BARRERE. E. R. PIRRSON, News-Herald Company.

While the Gazette is renovating its of fice, it would be well to abolish the editorial department of the paper, as that has been among the causes of estrangement between the Democracy of Highland and our fickle contemporary.

It is probable that Congress will not o women the r ardently craved by the woman suffragists. This fact should be set down to be referred to next Thanksgiving Day. Ladies are especially requested not to read the above.

The struggle between labor and capi tal has not yet reached a terminus. The strikers are not willing to obey the orders of the clear-headed Powderly, and thus the organization is crippled by internal dissensions. Irons is an inveterate "blowhard" and has done the Knights much injury in promulgating his rash idea that a universal strike by the order was necessary to adjust the difficulty. The persistent attempt of laborers to injure capital recalls the hoary simile of one biting off his nose to spite his face. A serious wound to capital must be fatal to the labor which de- duce market should offer higher prices pends upon it.

The distrust of the C. & M. Railroad Company, which existed in the public mind for some time after the stock was given over, has almost entirely died away. The policy of the company in avoiding newspaper puffs is commendable in contrast with other corporations which try to build railroads on and out of wind, using a Campbell press as a The company's course of conduct has been business-like from the outset and our most skeptical citizens console themselves with the truism that no mortal power could injure the previous condition of the road, and that every movement made by the new company for its own benefit betters us in a proportionate measure.

The Arti-Chinese riots that have been so frequent and so violent in the west of late are barbarous, inhumane, and signaffy diagracefully. Under the existing laws John Chinaman has as much right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness in our borders as Grover Cleveland has. If the laws are wrong, change them, but as long as they stand in force, the President should see to it that violators are punished to the full extent of legal penalties. We tasitly recognize China as an equal nation and should an American citizen be unjustly assaulted in her territory, we would be the company to the sale of the sale of the company to the sale of the sale of the company recognize the company of making a canvass in a Democratic district, but he will win, never fear. frequent and so violent in the west alted in her territory, we would be

The great political evil of the age is the use of money in elections to pur-chase votes. The test of a man's strength as a candidate is too often his command of money to buy off bitter oppenents, or soften the animosities of the rabble with the flowing bowl. Many a man is financially ruined by the steady drain on his pocket-book in one or two campaigns. The result of this nefamous practice, should it continue to extend its influence as it has in the last five years. is not a pleasant subject to sober thinkers. It means the downfall of all the grand principles which underlie our government, and the triumph of boodle and corruption over all the privileges feeted that the name of the paper would and institutions that the patriot holds

Neither party can claim immunity from the blight of this national curse. Both are guilty of a crime against citizenship. The subterfuge of party organs is to charge the opposing party with the wholesale use of capital to gain office, without denying that its own followers are guilty of a similar offense But that is not the fair way to treat the subject. Every true citizen will openly condemn political deviltry in any of its various phases, and the newspapers should express its contempt for the villiany of modern electioneering in double-leaded italics. The editor who attempts to screen his comrades in crime is king of the knaves who find shelter under his shield.

There are men now holding office in the United States, in the State of Ohio, in Highland county, who owe their success at the ballot-box to the able assistance of the almighty dollar. There are more of these men than the public sets pects. The present lamentable state of First, a ravenous desire for office; sec ond, the profligacy of one class of voters low the old habit of hunting up their men. One of these is, Road Supervisor boro. Wherever the salary of an office zens, or rather, inhabitants, who set no value upon the privileges of citizenship, and thus become the eager followers of the candidate who rolls the biggest barrel of boodle. As this class becomes larger or smaller will the present danger increase or diminish. The last division the smallest and most pitiable, is made up of those whom the pinch of want drives into the bondage of the politician, and who barter their rights for bread and butter.

It is high time for the better element It is high time for the better element, irrespective of party, to rebel against the management of "the rascals in both."
The sconer the good people of the country redeem their lost supremacy in the political field, by routing the rabble, the better for all. Managing committees in county, state and nation should pledge themselves firmly against the use of boodle, and organize to prosecute all violaters of the law.

You're Another One.

A disgusted Democratic tobacco raiser reminded us last week that three years age one pound of tobacco would buy two of sugar, now it takes two pounds of to-bacco to buy one of sugar, also that ten pounds of tobacco would buy a barrel of salt, now twenty pounds will hardly do it.—New Era.

Yes; and the same day a sick Repub lican reminded us that this wonderful reduction in the price of tobacco had taken place since Foraker's election. He also called our attention to the fact that in New York City, in a State pre sided over by a Democratic Governor sided over by a Democratic Governor, everything that the farmer has to sell is a far better price than in any city in Republican Ohio. "Putting this and that together" he was at a loss to know what the Republican tarmers of Ohio had made by electing Little Breeches Governor.—People's Defender.

And we beg to remind you, Brothe Eylar, that Governor Hill and Governor Foraker have no more to do with the state of the market in their respective his home in Kansas. states than Bill Macy's toes have with the London Times. The forces which govern the market lie far deeper in the problem of demand and supply than the feeble influence of a State Governor. postomos i greatly need to but natural that the New York pro-charge of i than those of cities in the interior, as New York is a shipping point and lies nearer to the seat of demand. Sometimes the market is perceptibly affected tion, resulting from universal distrust, but to assert that the governor of a State is responsible for the good or bad condition of the market in his state is responsible for the good or bad condition of the market in his territory G. S. W. is to show one's ignorance of the real laws governing the market. Such a cenclusion must arise from a superficial observation of causes and effects, and the terms superficial and Democratic are synonomeus.

Payment for Imaginary Corruption.

Lafayette (Ind.) Sunday Times (Dem.). At the count of the public money in Washington the funds were two cents short. At the count at the sub-treasury in New York there were five cents too much. This leaves a credit for the Republican party of three cents on the books of the Democratic administration. The difference should be put into the conscience fund as payment in full for the Republican corruption which existed only in the imaginations of Democratic stump orators.

Southwestern Ohio Normal School.

The prospect for a large attendance next term at the Southwestern Ohio Normal School is more promising than at previous sessions. The principal, Supt. Isaac Mitchell, has satisfied the educational public acquainted with this enterprise that the Normal at Georgetown. Ohio, is an exponent of the true educational idea.

The pupils soon catch the spirit of energy and earnestness, a characteristic of this institution, which urges them to rely cheerfully on themselves, to make themselves useful and agreeable in the world; to be thoughtful, to argue wisely, to unfold their talents, to shine, to conquer, and to possess.

The great prosperity that has marked this school during the past two years has enabled the principal to make valuable additions to his teaching force and facilities for reference and illustration.

The expense of boarding being reduced to a minimum for those desiring it, brings a course of excellent educational training within the reach of every young man and woman.

Teachers and prospective teachers who feel a need of more teaching power, also prospective business men, mechanics and farmers, who can not devote much time to going to school, will find here that which will throw light on the road to modern mastery.-Cincinnate Public School Journal, of April.

But speaking of names and titles, you ought to read "A Treaty of Peace, Friendship, and Commerce," which was concluded at Antananarivo, on the 13th of May (17th of Alakaosy), 1881, between the United States of America and the Kingdom of Madagasear. Her Majesty Ranavalomanjaka, Queen of Madagasear, was represented by Ravoninahitriniarivo, who signs his Malagasy title thus: "15 Voninahitra, Off. ID. P. Lehiben ny Mpanao Raharaha amy ny Vahiny" (which means, I suppose, "15th Honor, Officer of the Palace, Chief Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs"), and by a man of the name of Ramaniraka, whose title I forget. The titles are modest, but the Madagasear notable make up for the deficiency in the leugth of their names!

Eleven miles more were traversed be-fore we saw the welcome sight of the high board fence which surrounds the ostrich farm, and which we had been ostrich farm, and which we had been told to look for as the sign of the end of our journey. As we drew near, boards bearing the legent, "Ostrich farm; visitors admitted only on Sundays and Wednesdays," and placed in conspicuous positions, met the eye. We looked at each other in despair, for this spicuous positions, met the eye. We looked at each other in despair, for this was Friday. "Oh, they can't be so cruel as not to let us in, when we have driven twenty-two miles to see the ostriches," said one hopeful one. We came to a row of posts, and painted on the fence near by was the mandate, "Hitch horses here." "Had we not better drive up to the house and find out if we can get in before we hitch?" asked "the grand inquisitor." "Oh, no; let us do just as we are bid," said a timid sister, with an eye to propitiating the "powers that be." So we dismounted and walked up to the hoase, glad to stretch our limbs after our long drive. We were met by the inevitable Chinaman, who in pigeon English gave us to understand that the "boss" was away, but he thought we could see the birds. He led us to the entrance to the inclosure, and disappeared, leaving us to wonder where he might have gone, and try to catch glimpses, through the chinks in the fence, of all the fascinations beyond. Presently he returned, bringing with him a pleasant-faced young man, who accepted our apologies for coming at the wrong time, and expressed his willingness to show us the interior of the inclosure.

"The doctor is away," he said, "but I can show you around." So saying,

"The doctor is away," he said, "but I can show you around." So saying, he unlocked the gate, and the mysteries were revealed. The large space was subdivided into many different inclosures, in which were contined the ostriches, singly, in pairs, and in the largest division of all were twelve, the native-born ostriches, still young, spreckled and ugly. "How old are they when their plume is ready for the first plucking?" we asked. "From six months to a year; the period varies." We were not allowed to approach the fonces which inclosed the feathered strangers. "We have been obliged to make this rule, because 'isitors would irritate and annoy the birds by teasing them. Ladies would punch them with their parasols, and gentlemen were equally inconsiderate. We were also obliged to charge an admission fee, in self-protection. People came in crowds, asking no end of questions, and making a great deal of trouble. Fewer come now that an entrance fee is charged, and, as a rule, are less troublesome." "How many are there?" "The doctor imported eleven pairs, at ures, in which were contined the osblesome." 'How many are the blesome. The doctor imported eleven pairs, at dent we have had. bull. "That is one of them coming." said our guide. "That fellow crows all the time."

We looked at the musically-inclined ostrich. His long neck swelled to more than twice its usual thickness, and he sent forth crow after crow with great apparent satisfaction. The old fellow who had killed his mate seemed greatly enraged by the performances of his compatriot, and looked as if he would like to cross the division fence and commit another murder. The fences seemed low. "Can not they get across?" we saked. "No; they can not jump at all," we were told. "They are very ill-tempered. Great caution is necessary in approaching them. We feed them upon alfalfa and green barley, with corn once a day. Their water comes from an artesian well." "Does the dampness affect their plumes?" asked a lady. "I think it does. Some process of curling and dressing is necessary before plucking, which is done about once in nine months. We get fourteen plumes from each wing." "Are these all?" was another question. "There are some young ones in the incubating room, but they are not shown to visitors. Very few are allowed to enter that building. I had been here some time before I was permitted to go inside, and we have a man here now who has been with us five weeks and has not yet seen the interior. We keep a good watch-dog for the sole purpose of guarding the incubating room." "Is the experiment paying?" asked "the grand inquisitor." "I am not in the Doctor's confidence," answered our friend. We walked around, wondering at the strange sight. The encrmous creatures seemed contented, and, as he said, in the finest physical condition. Some were eating corn preedily. "The os-

In Africa the bees have a very hard time; for there man has a sharp-eyed, active little friend to help him find their carefully hidden honey. This little friend is a bird,—a rescally, shiftless friend is a bird,—a rascally, shiftless fellow, that not only falls to build a home for its little ones, but even goes so far as to make other birds have all the trouble and worry of bringing up and feeding them. Like the cuckoo, it puts its eggs in the nests of other birds.

it puts its eggs in the nests of other birds.

The "honey-guide," as it is called, is exceedingly fond of honey; or, if it can not have that, is very well satisfied with young bees. It is only about the size of a lark, and so is not specially fitted for encountering a swarm of bees lighting in defense of their home. Once in a while, it tries to rob a nest, but is usually well punished for doing so. The little bees seem to know that their stings can not injune the feather-covered body of the bird, and secordingly they direct their attacks at the eyes of the robber; and if the bird does not escape in time, it will be blinded, and so perish of starvation.

they direct their attacks at the eyes of the robber; and if the bird does not escape in time, it will be blinded, and so perish of starvation.

However, the honey-guide is seldom so foolish as to run any such risk. It prefers to have some one else steal the honey, and is content with a small portion for its share.

When it has found a nest, it darts away in search of a man. As soon as it sees one, it hovers over him, files about his head, perches near him, or flutters here and there in front of him, all the time chatting vigorously. The native knows in a moment what the little bird means; and as he loves honey as a child does candy, only something that is very important will prevent his accepting the honey-guide's invitation. When he is ready to follow, he whistles; and the bird seems to understand the signal, for it at once flies on, for a short distance and waits till the man is near, and then flies on a few yards farther. In this way the bird leads the man until the nest is reached. Then it suddenly changes its twitter for a peculiar note, and either hovers over the nest for a moment, or complexently sits down and lets the man find the nest, the best he can.

When it is found, the bees are smoked out with a torch or with a fire of leaves, according to the height of the nest from the ground. A small portion of the honey is given to the bird as its share of the plunder. If the little fellow has had honey enough, it disappears; but if, as is usually the case, it receives only enough to what its appetite, it will lead to another nest, and sometimes even to a third.—From "Honey-Hunting," by John R. Coryell, in St. Aicholas for Uctuber.
